

Connected but Still Alone?

(Basic, A-Level)

Marc Franco

Today, social media is a big part of life for many people around the world. We use social media sites like Facebook, Instagram, and TikTok to connect with friends and family. People can show parts of their lives. They share photos, stories, and ideas about their day, their job, or their home.

It is a good way to see what your friends are doing, even if they live far away. You can feel part of a community. You can also find a lot of new information and learn about other people and places.

This sounds good, yet there is another side to social media. Some people spend too much time on their phones. They might look at other people's lives and feel that their own lives are not as good as everyone else's. This can make them feel bad and cause psychological problems, especially among children and teenagers.

So, it is important to remember that life is more than what you see on a screen. Social media can connect you to people and information, but you should also put your phone down. Go out, talk with your family, and play a game with friends.
